From our Rector, Revd Tom Benson

Dear friends,

Well what a Summer.....hotter than 1976, a (slightly) less successful World Cup than 1966, hosepipe bans, and for some people the reality of wildfires. It has been a challenge for all of us and especially our farming communities who are having to cope with so many climactic changes. September traditionally feels to me more like the start of the new year than January. It is of course a time of new beginnings with the start of the school year, and a time when activities and events resume after the summer break.

There is something rather satisfying about September. The days are still often warm, but there is a noticeable change in the air. The mornings have a little more chill in them, the evenings are drawing in, and the hedgerows are beginning to show their autumn colours. September is also now recognised in the Church of England as a Season of Creation, a time to reflect on God as the giver and sustainer of all life. That seems particularly appropriate in a rural parish. We are surrounded every day by reminders of the extraordinary generosity of God: the changing fields, the birdsong, and the abundance of the hedgerows.

The autumnal equinox falls on 22nd of September this year, when day and night are roughly equal. It is a good reminder that the seasons keep turning, and that when things are difficult they will not last forever. There's a well-known Jewish tale about King Solomon asking for a device or ring that will make the sad man happy or the happy man sad and the inscription is simply this – 'This too shall pass'.

It is no accident that the Church gives us the season of Harvest at this time. Harvest is not simply an excuse for decorating the church with vegetables, flowers and sheaves of corn. It is an opportunity to stop and say thank you.

Thank you for the rain and sunshine, for the soil and the seed, for farmers and farm workers, for those who grow and produce our food, and for the many ordinary things which we can so easily take for granted.

So, as September begins, perhaps we might pause for a moment. Before we rush on to the next thing, let us give thanks for the summer that has been, and for the God who remains faithful through every changing season.

God bless, Tom

All Saints Braishfield held a BBQ in the church carpark for members of the church and village community in mid-August. Gazebos provided essential shade: due to the drought fire alert it was decided that the cooking would be done in the kitchen. It was a relaxed and friendly gathering of over fifty people and donations more than covered the costs of the food.

We are looking forward to our next two events for church and community - Hymns and Pimms at the Social Club in September and our Harvest Supper in October in the Church Room.

150th Anniversary of All Saints Awbridge Church 1876-2026

We are half way through our 150th celebrations with a special anniversary service on Sunday 9 August, which was an amazing celebration of all that is good in a village church, joyful music, traditional hymns, a feeling of community all surrounded by flowers and decorations for the 150th exhibition, led by Bishop Rhiannon, Bishop of Southampton. This is what she said afterwards “What struck me most was the deep affection in which the church is held by the local community. There was a tangible sense of pride, belonging and faith among those gathered, reflecting both the church's long history and its continuing place at the heart of village life.”

Our amazing 150th Exhibition took place from 3-14 August with outstanding displays and contributions from village families, church members, Craft and Chat Group, families associated with the church over the years and those who had written histories of their families in the Awbridge area. In particular we have been able to compile a list of our Vicars and Rectors over the years which enabled us to have a glimpse into their lives, while serving in Awbridge. Many thanks to all who contributed and to everyone who visited. Looking back at the history has made us realise too the faithful efforts of people who strived to build a church in this village, when journeys otherwise were to Michelmersh as the parish church or maybe Timsbury and Sherfield English. Also, now the windows have been cleaned, we can see their beauty and the faith stories behind them, in more detail. In addition, our windows for WW1 and WW2 remind us of the sacrifice of ordinary village men, fighting for their country, which include the QR codes, as at the Village War Memorial, giving more detail of their lives.

Psalms 46.10

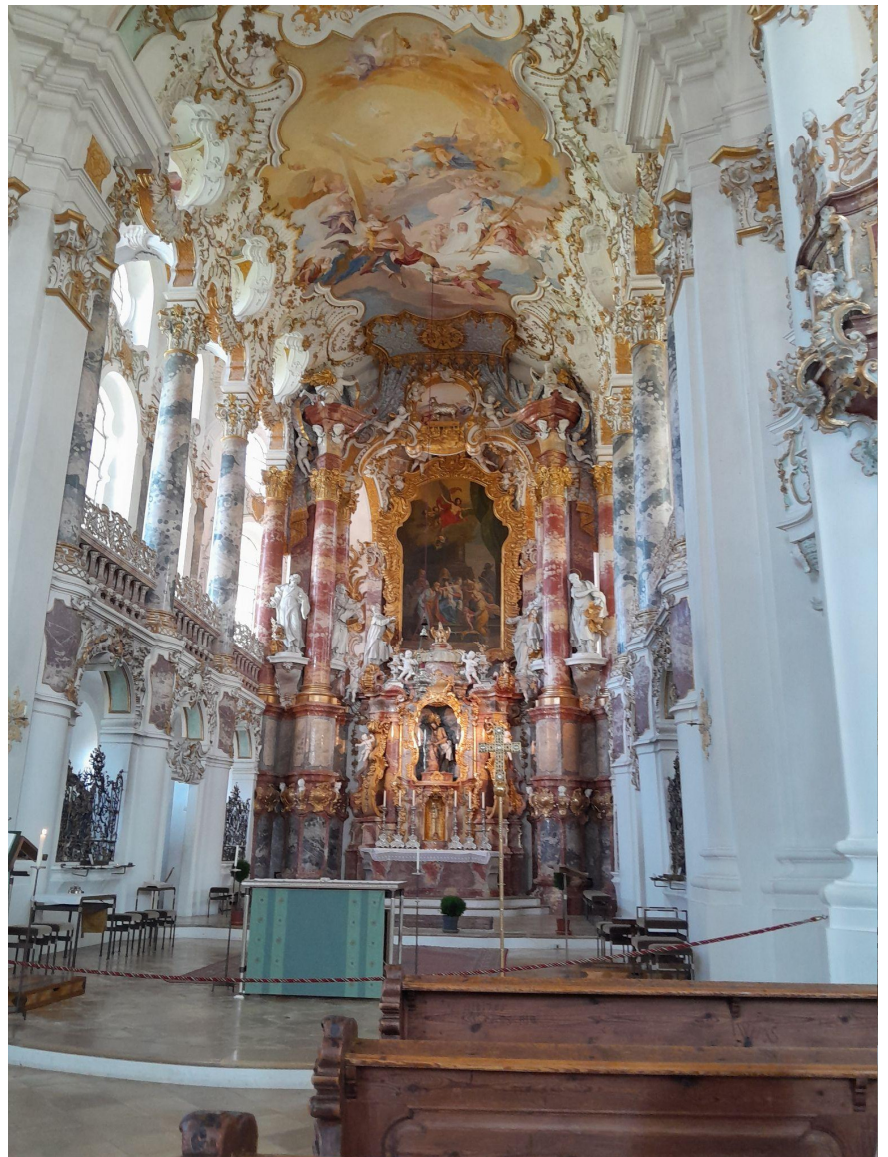

Two on a Bavarian Kirchenbummel

In case you feel the title might be a little indelicate for Five Alive, let me explain that Jerome K Jerome, having written "Three men in a boat", wrote a sequel: "Three men on the Bummel", about a bicycle trip through Germany with his two boating friends. Bummel, if you look it up online, is translated as "stroll", but it's best to think of it, equally, as a gentle-paced journey; in our case giving me the chance to look at lots of churches.

Well, we started near Füssen in Bavaria; down very close to the Austrian border. It's a town that is well worth a visit for a couple of days, or perhaps more, as it's not far from Lake Constance, and Augsburg, as well as having a well-preserved town centre. The castle has its own small, fairly plain, chapel, dedicated to St Vitus, who is the patron saint of dancers. The town's saint is Magnus, who evangelised this area of the Alps. He has a suitably splendid church, and was a contemporary of our own St Boniface, from Nursling, who went on to be Patron Saint of Germany itself.

Around thirty nine years ago I had come to this area to visit the Church of Wies; generally reckoned to be the best example of a baroque/rococo church in Germany. Well, that was in the days before the internet, and I found it open, but full of scaffolding! So off I went in a huff which, unintentionally, lasted all those years. My photos don't do it justice; nothing can really, but you might want to look it up online. In Germany it is known as the "Wieskirche", or, to give it its full name, "The Pilgrimage Church of the Scourged Redeemer". If you think that's a mouthful, try saying it in German!

*Chancel and altar of the
"Weiskirche"*

Pilgrimage is still popular in Germany, but it was even more so in the past. It is quite common to find a church standing in the middle of nowhere, or sometimes a church in a small village whose opulence apparently exceeds the means of the local population. Such places are there because of the pilgrims.

So, after two days we set off for the place in Germany I love above all others and have been visiting for forty years this year: Berchtesgaden Land, just south of Salzburg. It was also beloved of one A Hitler, who put the finishing touches to Mein Kampf in a mountain hut after his early release (for good behaviour!) from Landsberg Prison. It's an amazing place, with mountains, walks, lakes and fresh air you can almost drink. People come here to throw themselves off mountain tops attached to flimsy sails. As I sit on my balcony writing this, I can see three of them. I suppose it saves paying for a return ticket on the cable car.

Food is amazing; every year a couple of hundred Bavarians are admitted to hospital with pork overdoses, though they rarely prove fatal, fortunately. (Though vegetarians would point out that they do for the pigs.) The locals like to drink their beer by the "Mass", i.e. a one litre glass. One is OK, but after two you feel like you want to invade Poland. A local family, called Grassl, make spirits distilled from all sorts of things, including mountain flowers. A well-known one is made from Gentian ("Enzian".) Take a sip, but if you don't like it, throw the rest away; just preferably not near anything living.

Everywhere, even in remote places, there are wayside crosses and small chapels; often built by a fairly well-off family on their own farm. They are almost universally well-maintained. How do they do it? Well, in Germany, if you put down a denomination on your registration form, you will pay a small, but significant, sum each month to that denomination! Oddly, it only applies to Christians and Jews. (It could be around 500 annually euros for someone earning 45,000 Euros per year.) How do you get out of it? Well, you can go through a formal process of renunciation, but if you do, you can forget about church marriage or a funeral service! I can't see it catching on in the UK.
